Scotland and Malawi: an old partnership, a new approach?

David Hope-Jones, Principal Officer Scotland-Malawi Partnership

Scotland and Malawi have a shared history dating back more than 155 years to the travels of Dr Livingstone. David Hope-Jones will look to identify some of the key distinctive features of the bilateral relationship; ask whether this is evidence of an innovative new approach to international development; highlight a few key recent events; and provide comment and analysis on the contemporary social, economic and political landscape in Scotland and Malawi.

Tuesday 18th November, 5.15pm

Yudowitz Lecture Theatre, Wolfson Medical School Building

Hidden Hunger

Prof. John Briggs (Chair), University of Glasgow; Olive Towey, Concern Worldwide; David Pratt, Foreign Editor, Sunday Herald

Panel members will provide a valuable insight into the challenges presented by hidden hunger and tangible solutions to the 'broken' food system of today. The discussion will be followed by a question and answer session as well as the opportunity to view Gareth Bentley's photo essay highlighting the effects of chronic under-nutrition in Zambia and sustainable solutions that have helped transform the lives of some of the world's poorest people.

Events are free and open to the public.

Each talk will be followed by a drinks reception.
